M. J. BISCHOF'S,

Furniture Polish!

As the strongest evidence of the excellence of the Furniture Polish sold by Mr. M. J. Bischof, it is only necessary to state that more than seven thousand bottles have been disposed of in this city and neighborhood in the last sixty days. It is an excellent preparation for the purpose for which it is recommended and gives satisfaction in every case. It is now in the hands of many of the leading merchants of Mason and adjoining counties, and is fast becoming a staple article.

A very useful and excellent article now being introduced in this city, is a

FURNITURE POLISH,

Sept. 16, 1w.d.

MAYSVILLE, KY.

THE FIRST SONG.

A little old pair of toots, go I back!
Embroidered in my coat's back;
With buttons of brass, both front and back;
To match the trousers in my sack,
All buttons and fancy ones.

A little white silk waistcoat and face
That went with the trousers, too;
I laughed till the tears ran down my face,
To think of me in so small a space,
And how like a gourd I grew.

It is nearly twenty years ago
That I wore this baby suit,
So long that to-day I do not know
If pride in my childhood face did show
As I touched the silk-worked fruit.

Nearly—ah me! all of twenty years!
And it makes me feel so sad,
That truly my eyes are filled with tears
At thought of trials and hopes and fears
Which came to that little lad.

Poor little fellow! I wish that he—
My poor little boy won what he knows to-day!
But, dear little boy, he didn't see
That ever a cloud on his character be—
Perhaps 'twas the better way.

For none could tell if e'er years to come
Would send me joy or woe,
Nor whether his weary feet would roam
From the good and true he learned at home,
And so it seems good to me.

For the boy of him died out one day,
A man grew up in his place;
A very good man I dare not say,
The boy was better—told away
The clothes with their ruffled lace.

At thought of the trials and hopes and fears
Oh, I feel, full sad,
And truly my eyes are filled with tears,
What I think—say, of thirty years
Is gone with the boy.

—James Berry Beuse, in Boston Transcript.

Propagating by Budding.

When a fine variety of fruit or flower has been obtained, it is desirable that it should be preserved and disseminated. Sometimes this can be done by planting the seed, but often the tree raised from seed will more nearly resemble the original stock of which the good variety is an offspring and improvement. Various methods of propagation in haying in view the desired result are used, such as cuttings, layers, suckers, dividing roots, grafting and budding. Of all these the last is often found to be the best. The process consists in affixing a bud of one tree or plant in the stem of another in such a way that it will grow into and become a part of the stem, and at the same time continue its natural growth, unfolding and developing into a distinct stem and branches in such a way that when no shoots of the stem to which it is affixed are allowed to grow, it shall constitute all of the tree above its point of union, and bear fruit of the same kind as the tree from which it was taken. Of course there must be some likeness or affinity between the tree from which the bud was taken and that in which it is put, and the nearer the relationship the more likely is the operation to be successful. A pear bud can sometimes be made to live on an apple tree. Some varieties unite readily on the quince, but it will be impossible to make a pear bud live on a peach tree; and so of other varieties.

To be successful in budding, the work must be done when the stem in which the bud is inserted is in vigorous growth. The bark can then be read by lifted from the wood, and the prepared bud be placed in such position that the sap which has been subjected to the chemical assimilation of the leaves, and is passing downward on the surface of the wood through the inner bark or albumen, will come in direct contact with it and aid in forming a speedy union. Before commencing the work of budding, one should provide himself with a proper knife and material necessary to bind the bud in its place. Knives are made expressly for the purpose, with a thin ivory end to the handle, but any pocket knife with a thin blade rounded at the end will serve the purpose. Strips or strings of basswood are best for tying, but, in the absence of these, other material will serve the purpose.

To prepare the bud, take a cion of the present season's growth, and cut off the portions of each end that have imperfectly developed buds. Next cut off the leaves at about the middle of the foot stalks. Then take the cion in your left hand, with the small end pointing toward you, or partly under the left arm; insert the knife blade, which should be sharp, half an inch below the bud; cut through the bark and a little into the wood; pass it under the bud, bringing it out a little above, thus taking off the bud with the bark and a thin slice of wood attached. Then make in the stem or stock in which the bud is to be inserted a horizontal or transverse cut through the bark, the height depending on the size of the stock, which may be from one-quarter of an inch to an inch in diameter, and of the bud to be inserted, and from this make an incision down the stock about an inch long, being careful not to cut so deep as to injure the wood. These cuts will resemble the letter T. Now lift the bark on each side of the upright incision by passing the ivory handle or the back of the rounded end of the knife, as you may use the one or the other, under it. If the stock is in proper condition, it will not be necessary to lift the bark the whole length of the incision, but only at the angles. Now take the prepared bud by the foot stalk and enter it under the loosened angles of the bark, pushing it gently downward to the bottom of the incision. The eye of the bud will now be from one-fourth to half an inch below the horizontal incision. If the upper end of the bark is above this incision it must be cut off square across, so that it will just match with the bark of the stock.

When the bud is thus placed it must be fixed by binding it with the bass wood or with woolen yarn in such way that every part of it will be covered except the eye. After about two weeks, or as soon as the bud has made a union with the stock, this bud should be removed or loosened. The stock should soon thereafter be cut off to within a foot or so above the bud, and when the latter has made a growth of three or four inches should again be cut in or have all leaves, buds and sprouts removed. Care should also be taken that no sprouts grow on the stock below the bud.

Budding in this latitude is usually performed in the summer or early part of autumn. For success three things are essential. First, that the bark part freely from the wood of the stock. Second, that the bud be well ripened and properly prepared. Third, that the two be properly adjusted. It is well that the buds be put in on the north side of the stock when practicable, as they are thus sheltered from the direct rays of the sun. The operation is one of some nicety, and to do it well and rapidly requires considerable experience, but it is astonishing how quickly it can be done by an expert.

Another process, known as annular budding, is sometimes used on trees of hard wood and thick bark. A ring of bark is taken from the stock, and one of equal size, containing the bud desired to be grown. If the stock be larger than the cion, it will not be necessary to remove the bark from its whole circumference; on the other hand, the cion is larger than the stock, the length of the cion can be reduced. The parts should be well fitted and tied with matting after the wound has been covered with grafting wax.—N. F. Sun.

Fans.

"Women are armed," says the Spectator, "with fans as men with swords, and sometimes do more execution with them." Since the days of good Queen Anne men have left off wearing swords in private life, and somehow, though ladies still brandish fans, they do not occupy the same place in the female economy. They are not a necessary part of the costume even to those who array themselves in the most faded of Miss Greenaway's autumnally tinted vestures. It is still more remarkable that, though prizes have recently been offered and an exhibition held for designs of fans, nothing original or in any way out of the common was produced. The patronage of royalty failed to evoke a single painting which could be shown as evidence that since Addison's day taste and skill in decoration have advanced. The Spectator, describing the second motion in the exercise of the fan—that, usefully, of "Unfurling"—calls it the most pleasing part of his drill to those who are looking on. "It discovers on a sudden an infinite number of Cupids, garlands, altars, birds, beasts, rainbows, and the like agreeable figures." Every one in the regiment held a picture in her hand, and the subject of every picture is thus clearly indicated, and the description would serve equally well to describe a modern show of "that little modish machine."

Views of gardens, in which move figures in Watteau-like costumes, or none, Cupids, and all the goddesses, predominated largely, and it was abundantly evident that none of the competitors had made the slightest attempt to strike out a new line of fan decoration, and that the best were only anxious that their productions should be the nearest possible imitation of old work. It must be conceded that a fan is not an easy thing to decorate effectively. The folds into which it falls are so stiff that a picture is spoilt, and can not be properly displayed even when the fan is new. Landscapes and other scenes are all very well on the Japanese stiff hand-screens; but on folding fans they are out of place, and the wonder is that modern designers do not endeavor by some device, which it is our business to invent for them, to make the beauty of a fan consist in the way the picture is adapted to the conditions; or, as Gothic architects used to say, to render the construction ornamental. A handsomely painted fan is a thing to hang up, not to use. It is not made to go into folds without risk of ruin. It is not, in short, properly a fan, but a picture. There is something wrong here. Fans are an infinitely little subject for the display of high art; but no doubt, to use again the words of the Spectator, something might be done, "provided a woman applies her thoughts to it."—Saturday Review.

The Suez Canal.

When Napoleon sent his engineers to take the levels across the Isthmus of Suez in order to determine the practicability of digging a canal through the sand for commercial purposes, they made out that the surface of the Gulf of Suez was thirty feet higher than the Mediterranean, and so the project was for the time given up. The blunder in the survey was not discovered until 1840, when new schemes began to be agitated concerning a ship channel that would shorten the voyage from Europe to India and the East by almost the entire distance around the continent of Africa.

In 1854 M. de Le sepi formed a canal company and obtained a grant from the Vicere of Egypt for ninety-nine years. The scheme was looked upon with suspicion by British engineers and British capitalists, and the inception and prosecution of the enterprise were largely due to the French. In 1859 the work was begun, and ten years later the Red Sea and the Mediterranean met in the Bitter Lakes. The total length of the canal is not far from 100 miles, about seventy-five miles of the course being formed by excavation and twenty-five miles lying through the shallow lakes of the isthmus, which, in many places, required deepening. The ordinary width of the canal is 325 feet at the surface and seventy-two feet at the bottom, the depth of the water being twenty-six feet. There are no locks throughout its course, and its termini are Suez, at the entrance to the Gulf of Suez on the south, from which point there are railroads to Cairo and Alexandria and a "fresh-water canal" to the Nile, and Port Said at the margin of the Mediterranean on the north. The building of an artificial harbor at each terminus, with the necessary protections, was reckoned a greater undertaking than the excavation of the canal itself.

The work was formally opened on the 17th of November, 1869, and on the 25th it was publicly announced that Lord Beaconsfield had purchased from Ismail Pasha, who had become viceroy of Egypt under the title of Khedive, 176,602 out of the 400,000 shares of £20 each. The sum paid was £4,080,000, and the commissions to the Rothschilds and other expenses of the transaction amounted to about £100,000 more. By the terms of transfer the Government receives interest at five per cent. on the shares till the year 1894, after which it is to receive the full dividends. There are three members of the Board of Directors representing the interest of the British Government, one of whom is a resident director in Paris, where he has hitherto acted in perfect accord with the French majority in the directory.

The following table, compiled by the New York World, shows the enormous traffic that has passed through the canal and paid tolls since it was opened:

Year.	Tons.	Tonnage.	Receipts.
1870.	435.	435,911.	$1,061,865
1871.	705.	701,467.	1,708,746
1872.	1,082.	1,439,101.	3,281,518
1873.	1,173.	2,085,072.	4,570,464
1874.	1,214.	2,423,072.	5,971,577
1875.	1,491.	2,617,738.	5,777,230
1876.	1,437.	3,075,107.	5,355,000
1877.	1,453.	3,418,949.	6,324,969
1878.	1,593.	3,291,353.	6,210,640
1879.	1,477.	3,239,442.	5,937,212
1880.	2,021.	4,345,319.	6,988,000
1881.	2,737.	5,734,300.	10,254,830

In 1870 England furnished 64 per cent. of the tonnage which sought that channel; in 1871, 63; in 1872, 70; in 1873, 69; in 1874 and in 1875, 71; in 1876, 73; in 1877, 78; in 1878, 79; in 1879, 77; in 1880, 79; and last year 82 per cent, or more than four-fifths of the whole amount.

It will readily be seen that although England does not own a controlling interest in the corporation, she is nevertheless under superior obligation to keep the canal open to commerce. When the Russo-Turkish war broke out in 1877 there were fears lest Russia, taking advantage of the fact that the canal was in the territory of a Turkish dependency, might seize or blockade it, but England lost no time in declaring that the canal should be neutral, and in pointing out the fact that its unobstructed navigation was essential to every State in Europe. That necessity still exists, and upon Great Britain, as the power that can least afford to have the highway to India closed, falls the burden of restraining Arabi Pasha and his army to such an extent that they shall not have the ability to interfere with the canal.—Detroit Post and Tribune.

The Green River (Ky.) courier takes the calico off the shrub in the matter of snake stories. It tells of a reptile that swallowed a rabbit and then tried to crawl through a rail fence, but stuck. While in this position it swallowed bunny numbers two and three, and, unable to get either backward or forward, hung on the rail until it died.

THE ninth annual convention of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railway Mutual Benefit Association was held in Chicago, Tuesday. The annual report makes a good showing in membership, benefits, &c. The old board of officers was re-elected, and the next convention meets at Erie, Pa., on the third Tuesday of next September.

THE Washington correspondent of the Courier-Journal says: The synopsis of Dickson's sworn statement in regard to the attempts at bribery, which he has filed with the District Attorney, was published this morning. It contains only one point in addition to what he set forth in yesterday's statement. Dickson says Bowen, in the course of the conversation in which he urged the former to secure the conviction of Brady and Dorsey, asserted that after the conviction the President would pardon the defendants, possibly within thirty days. To Dickson's inquiry on the point, Bowen answered that Bliss, Merrick and Kerr were entirely ignorant of this movement on the part of Attorney General Brewster. The District Attorney acting upon the information of Foreman Dickson, will issue a warrant for the arrest of Brewster, Cameron and Henry A. Bowen, to answer the charge of attempting to bribe a juror. Merrick is busily engaged in getting his information into shape to prevent the District Attorney from acting, so we are evidently on the brink of a very unpleasant scandal, involving charges and counter charges of bribery and perjury.

When to Cut Your Tobacco Crop.

Tobacco, says the Farmer's Home Journal, ought not to be cut when there is a probability of rain before it can be safely housed. When caught in a shower it is bespattered with dirt, and its value greatly impaired. Neither should tobacco be cut immediately after a rain, because much of the gummy matter, which adds to its weight, is dissolved and washed away by a rainfall. If the harvest is, however, delayed three or four days, this substance will accumulate again and be as abundant as ever. Tobacco should not be cut while the dew is on the leaf; if so it gathers enough to render it gritty, a decidedly objectionable feature, especially designed for chewing purposes. It should not be cut on the morning of a very hot day, else it will sunburn before it can be housed. By the way, in case of sunburn it is probably best to let it remain in the field and take the dew.

Beginners are also cautioned against cutting this crop immediately after noon on a hot day, for the reason that the sun will scorch it before it wilts sufficiently to handle. Inasmuch as in warm weather it is unsafe to expose cut tobacco to the sun between the hours of 11 in the morning and 2 in the afternoon, cutting is usually accomplished previous to the first mentioned hour, or after the second, and only so much is cut as can be housed the same day, there are growers who follow the practice of cutting the plants late in the afternoon and taking them to the sheds in the morning as soon as the dew is off.

HEADQUARTERS for Shirts, Collars, Socks, Handkerchiefs and Neckwear at J. W. Sparks & Bro. Sept 18-6t.

The prize tomato of the fair is known as the "Hoefflich." It is small, but full of meat, firm, red, and juicy.

THE steamer Clipper will make hourly trips from the city to the fair grounds during the remainder of the week.

HON. NEWTON P. REID, of Owingsville, dropped dead on the 19th inst. He was an uncle of Judge Reid, of the Superior Court.

THE Democratic State Central Committee to whom was submitted the Adams-Kendall case in the Tenth Congressional District have remanded the quarrel to a primary election.

Gov. BLACKBURN has decided not to call an extra term of the Boyd circuit court to try Neal and Craft, the Ashland murderers. They will ask for a change of venue from Boyd and it will probably be granted to them.

THE Democrats of the first Ohio District have nominated J. F. Follett for Congress. Isaac M. Jordan was chosen in the second district. Both conventions were well attended and the proceedings marked with harmony and enthusiasm.

A TWO-STORY frame dwelling near Concord, belonging to Major Burns, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning while the family were at dinner. The house was totally consumed, the furniture and personal effects, were, however, saved.

PROCEEDINGS are shortly to be begun against the estate of Capt. Howgate, the defaulting disbursing officer of the signal service, with the expectation that the government will realize therefrom the sum of $100,000. Howgate is still missing.

THE old reliable steamer Handy, with Captain Bruce Redden in command, is plying between the wharf and fair landing. The Handy is officered by as clever a set of gentlemen as ever manned a steamer. She makes a trip every 45 minutes.

MESSRS. A. R. GLASCOCK & CO., announce in this issue of the BULLETIN the arrival of a large and carefully selected stock of dry goods notions etc., of the latest and most fashionable styles. They have bought this stock under very favorable circumstances and are therefore able to offer bargains in all departments that must be appreciated by close buyers. It is one of most attractive stocks of goods ever brought to the city as all will see who take the trouble to call.

THE Mountain girl did a rushing business Wednesday, transporting visitors to the fair grounds. The girl is a new boat, and is commanded by Capt. J. S. Hopkins, an experienced river man. Passengers are sure to receive kind treatment if they travel on this steamer.

Miss Lula Gallagher, of Elizaville, is the guest of Miss Carrie Hubbard.

SECOND DAY OF THE FAIR.

The Crowd a Big Increase Over the First Day's Attendance...Deck Wright Wins The Purse in the 2:20 Class.

The crowd in attendance on the second day of the fair, although not so very large, was a big increase over the attendance on the first day. The exhibition of mules, jacks and jennets, horses and cattle was excellent. The racing was fine. The mule race which took place in the afternoon was undoubtedly the occasion of more laughter and merriment than has been witnessed at a fair for a long time. The following is a list of the premiums awarded:

MULES.

Best mule 4 years and over, to W. W. Baldwin & Co., of Mason county; premium $20. Best mule 3 years and under 4, to Mark Brannon, of Mayslick; premium $15. Best mule 2 years and under 3, to Tom Farmer, of Washington; premium $10. Best pair broke mules, to W. W. Baldwin, of Mason county; premium $25.

JACKS AND JENNETS.

Best jack of any age, to Wm. E. Wells, of Mason county; premium $15.

HORSES.

Best model mare or gelding, to Harvey Thorpe, of Millersburg; premium $25. Best road mare or gelding, to Robinson & Doty, of Camp Dick Robinson; premium $50.

Best barouche mare or gelding, to Ed. Martin, of Brown county, O.; premium $25.

CATTLE-JERSEYS.

Bull 3 years and over, to Sam Poyntz, of Mason county; premium $25.

Cow 3 years and over, to Sam Poyntz, of Mason county; premium $25.

Cow 2 years and under 3, to same; premium $20.

Cow 1 year and under 2, to same; premium $10.

SHORT HORNS.

Bull 3 years and over, to E. G. Bedford, of Paris; premium $25.

Bull 1 year and under 2, to same; premium $10.

Cow 3 years and over, to T. J. McGibben, of Cynthiana; premium $25.

Cow 2 years and under 3, to E. J. Bedford, of Paris; premium $20.

Cow 1 year and under 2, to Robert Crumby, of Cynthiana; premium $10.

Best herd of short horns to E. G. Bedford, of Paris; premium $25.

Best herd of Jerseys, to S. M. Poyntz, of Mason county; premium $25.

MULE RACE.

Slowest mule, to J. E. Parker, of Mason county; premium $25.

Second slowest, to Mark Brannon, of Mayslick; premium $15.

The race in the class for horses that had never trotted better than 2:20, proved to be very exciting. There were five horses to start, Lumps, Leontine, Deck Wright, Post Boy and Fannie Robinson. Lumps, one of the favorites with the betters, was distanced on the third heat, after winning the first heat in 2:21, the best time that was made. After Lumps was distanced, the race was hotly contested by Deck Wright and Post Boy. Wright won the second, third, and was given the fifth heat, making him the winner of the race. Post Boy proved to be a good stayer, coming in first or second in every heat. The boy won the fourth heat and came in ahead of Deck Wright in the fifth heat which was given to the latter horse. The boy did some little running in this heat, we understand which was the cause of his being put back to second place by the judges. The crowd "kicked" hard against this decision of the judges. We understand the matter is to be brought up again to-day. The following is a summary of the races:

Deck Wright..... 3 1 2 1

Post Boy..... 2 2 2 1 2

Leontine..... 4 3 3 4 3

Fannie Robinson..... 5 1 4 3 4

Lumps..... 5 1 5 dls

Time—2:21, 2:25, 2:22, 2:21, 2:22 1/2.

The Hop.

The universal verdict is that the Hop last night was the most brilliant and reverche affair of the kind ever given in Maysville.

The means adopted by the young men secured the attendance of a very select crowd without giving offense to anyone, and the rooms were comfortably filled with the beauty and elite of Kentucky, interspersed with many charming representatives of her sister states. The costumes of the ladies were superb, and the chaperones vied with the girls both in personal appearance and in elegance of dress. The order maintained was perfect, and in every particular down to the most minute detail, the arrangements made for the pleasure of the guests were excellent and made the Hop a grand success. Even the old men who, when the affair was being arranged, were continually reminding the committee of how they used to conduct balls when they were young and wondering why the committee did not do so and so, even they admit that the Hop was more elegant than any their young days had witnessed. We have not space to give the names of the guests and the costumes. Another Hop will be given Friday night, under the same auspices, and nothing will be left undone to make it even more enjoyable than the first.

WIT AND WISDOM.

—Many a man thinks him self a light in his society world, when in fact he is only a light weight.

—S. J. K. Hubbard, Texas: "Where can I obtain the Life of Jesse James?" We do not know. The Ford boys took it.—Texas Sifters.

—California has discovered spider webs so stout that they can be used to tie up grain bags. The web of fate would stand a poor show out that way.—Detroit Free Press.

—There are in North America 880 different species of birds, and yet you have probably seen a boy waste two hours of valuable time in trying to put a head on one little chickadee.

—Little Willie has been summarily corrected by his mother for repeated acts of naughtiness. The punishment being over: "Papa," he sobs, in tones of anguish, "how could you marry such an ill-tempered woman as mamma?"

—"Ma, are you going out?" "Yes, dear; why do you ask?" "Don't you want to stay and see the fun?" "Why, Willie, what do you mean?" "Why, I heard pa tell Maggie that when you went away they would have a regular picnic."

—If those who have large families to board, with provisions at present prices, would stop to think that many men in this city board locomotives and railway trains every day, they would be more content and murmur less.—Waterbury American.

—When a man's hair begins to grow thin on top it is a sign that he shouldn't think quite so much.—York Dispatch. "Think" rhymes with something else which he should not do so much.—Philadelphia News. Think, blink, w-i-ah, yes, we see; but we shouldn't think excessive winking would affect a man's hair—unless the winks are given in the presence of the man who draws the soda water.—Norristown Herald.

—What do you do for a living?" asked an Austin Justice of a huge, burly negro, who had been arrested for vagrancy. "My wife takes in washin', and works out by day." "I asked you what your trade was?" "I done tole yee. A man and his wife am one, and ef we am one, what do we want two trades for? My trade am de washin' my wife takes in." The Justice sighed and said: "Poor fellow. You are overworked. You need rest!"—Texas Sifters.

—Patrick has a great power of enjoyment after all, and always laughs at the right time. One day he saw a bull attack a man, and he had to hold on to his sides with both hands, the scene was so funny. After a little the animal turned his attention in another direction, and poor Patrick, after exploring the heights, came down with a thump on the other side of the fence. He rubbed his wounds, and as he trudged along the worse for wear, he said to himself: "Faith, I'm glad I had my laugh when I did, or I wouldn't have had it at all!"—N. Y. Herald.

Only the General Manager.

At a station on one of the railroads leading out of Detroit the train had arrived and departed, the other day, when the station agent, who had been in the place about three weeks, and was looking for a call every hour to come to Detroit and take charge of the line, was approached by a quiet, well-dressed man, smoking a cigar, who asked:

"Keep you pretty busy here?"

"Yum," was the jerky reply.

"Business on the increase?"

"Yum," again.

"Do you run this station?" asked the quiet man, after a turn on the platform.

"Nobody else runs it!" growled the agent. "Have you got a patent ear-coupler?"

"Oh, no."

"I was going to tell you to go to thunder with it if you had. Want special freight rates, I suppose?"

"No, sir."

"I don't give any passes."

"I don't want any."

"Waiting for the next train?"

"Not particularly."

"Want to charter a car?"

"No."

The agent left him on the platform, and entered his office and busied himself for half an hour, when the quiet man looked in on him and asked:

"What's the salary of a position like this?"

"That's my business," was the prompt reply.

"What's the income from this station?"

"Ask the baggage man."

"Your name is —, isn't it?"

"Suppose it is?"

"Oh, nothing much—only I'm the General Manager of the line, and I'd like to exchange cards with you.—Detroit Free Press.

The overseers of the poor in Boston have $525,828 in trust funds, the income of which is annually distributed for specific purposes, in accordance with the desires of the donors, or disposed of by the overseers for the best interests of those whom they deem entitled to receive it. The largest of these funds is the "David Sears charity," amounting to $260,645. Other large funds are the Boylston education fund, amounting to $120,181, and the Pemberton general fund, amounting to $104,602.
